Coming home is hard Cameron finished his military requirements to come back home to the sleepy ranching town he fled when he was younger. With his mom re-marrying his former stepfather, he suddenly is thrust back into an old lifestyle. The problems start when he meets an alluring young woman, someone he immediately begins to fall for. He didn't realize who she was at first and tries to fight the truth that his heart is screaming, but his head is denying. Alison has always dreamed of the day Cameron would notice her. To her, she was the hated brat in Cameron's eyes and more than time and looks have changed her. Seven years later, her love for Cameron still burns hot, and she hopes to at least find some friendship with him if nothing else. A love forbidden The ranch has some significant problems to work and deal with. Water rights issues, people cutting fences, and a drought that has everyone worried about the prices of beef. Can Cameron and Alison work together to save their families businesses, or will their pasts push them apart, splitting the ranch wide open? Cowboy Up
