If "people power" was the Filipino gift to the modern theory of revolution, this series of three volumes on Filipino philosophy is a parallel gift in the field of philosophy. It fits well into the series on "Cultural Heritage and Contemporary Change" of the Council for Research in Values and Philosophy (RVP) with some fifteen volumes from Central and Eastern Europe and another fifteen from East Asia, with yet others from Africa and Islam. The present three volumes take a decisive step ahead in this search.
