Since the moment of my creation, I have always been one thing. A warrior for Heaven and an asset to the Almighty. It is because of this position and the faith my Father has in me that he heads to Earth, leaving me with an undertaking of my own—one that I may think I have under control, but am quickly coming to learn I am power against.

There has been talk of the Beloved since the beginning of time, but that is all it is. Talk. Fables told to one another in order to gain some small measure of amusement. There has never been truth to the stories...until Faith. The stubborn—lead with your heart Bringer of Light is the last thing I need and the very thing I am coming to find I can't live without. Will I risk it all, succumbing to the bond in the process or will I turn away from it and Heaven forever? Only time will tell what will happen when an archangel and a ball of light collide. All I know is, no one will ever be the same.
