What would you do if the most important people in your world were suddenly and violently taken away from you? Everything is excruciating! Everything is broken! Ean Montgomery and Dani Adams were each forced to see the same grief counselor after a drunk driver killed both Dani's husband and Ean's wife and six year old son. Two cars demolished, two families killed. In an unconventional twist of therapy, Dani and Ean were each given a private cell phone and only the first initial of their first names. They were then instructed to reach out to one another in order to share their grief...to heal. The rules: Communicate only through text messages and never reveal our real names or other personal details.

Neither planned to contact the other, but with all hope and the will to live gone... Over the course of a year, through texting alone, they form a unique bond. Friendship blossoms into something deeper. They were never supposed to meet, but fate had other plans, and into their world of loss and despair, something amazing began to grow... But can the can the passion they've found sustain itself with the deep, soul-twisting pain that never seems to fade? Join Ean and Dani on their journey as they discover that even in their darkest days, hope does exist and when tragedy turns your world upside down, the miracle of love can set everything right again. This story woke me up in the middle of the night and the best way I can it describe is...like listening to an audiobook. I felt their journey with such intensity it took my breath away. I got up, opened notes on my iPhone, and my thumbs got to work. That was October 4, 2015. Since then, I've been very fortunate. I was introduced to an amazing editor and together we've spent the last year and a half making Dani and Ean's story shine. It's a story about hope and how the power of love can heal even the deepest wounds.
