Fortinbras has one aim in life, revenge. When he was ten years old, he swore an oath to kill the man who murdered his family. He's given up everything, including love, to pursue his goal. The only thing he has left is Orange Hope, the town he protects. In this dystopian, action novella, 22nd century earth isn't advanced or civilized. The ravages of natural and human disasters have destroyed governments and societies. There is little left for the few people who struggle to stay alive. When an invasion threatens to destroy Orange Hope, Fortinbras moves to protect his town. He's committed to the fight, but can he save the town? He's willing to give his life, but the cost might be higher than he realizes . . .
