Move away from the safety of the light, and confront what lingers in the shadowy places. Ten genre authors deliver a glimpse of their own personal brand of horror. These eleven stories are the twisted fruits of their labours. In 'Dubious Pickles' a child's curiosity can go too far.

A dark entity stalks the woman who escaped him in 'Carousel Eyes'. Unrequited love can be bloody murder in 'Victim of Love'. Replacing body parts is child's play for Frankenstein, but the decay of his mind is not so easily remedied in 'Pieces'. A mere sampling of what lies between the covers of this book. Welcome to Purgatorium: The Element of Horror.
