Note: This is a short story (9,000 words or about 30 pages). WAR AND ONE MAN'S WILL TO SURVIVE. When a surprise attack leaves Army sniper Sergeant John Miller stranded in the mountains of Afghanistan with his critically injured spotter, he is forced to rely on his training and resilience to stay alive. Fighting against an unforgiving wilderness and an enemy tracking his every move, this abandoned soldier will do whatever it takes to save his friend and make it home to his wife and little girl. In a race against time, one man's will to survive is put to the test against a determined and brutal enemy, forcing him to fight his own demons of cynicism, disillusionment, and an overwhelming sense that the struggle is not worth the reward.
